

Helen Humphreys Bio

Helen Humphreys has built support for controversial energy projects for the last 12 years in the Midwest and mid-Atlantic regions. As AES stakeholder relations manager, Helen works with team members throughout AES to highlight how clean energy can build a better future for our economy, the environment, our communities and our nation's workforce. Helen marries traditional public relations measures with digital campaigns to reach a greater number of people and invite them to demonstrate their support for clean energy projects.

Before joining private industry, Helen worked in both local and state government, including the Pa. Department of Environmental Protection, where she experienced firsthand the positive (and negative) impact citizens can have when advocating for (or against) a project. You can learn more about her work and accomplishments on LinkedIn—if you do, please say hello by sending a connection request and include #VEWC in the message.